Hondo Seeking Location of Federal Penitentiary

Largely Attended Mass Meeting Appoints Working Committees.

Hondo is going after the location of a Federal Penitentiary in an organized way. A hurriedly called mass meeting brought a hundred or so citizens of Hondo together at the courthouse Monday night at eight o'clock. President J. G. Barry of the Chamber of Commerce presided and stated the purpose of the meeting. As has been known for some time, the Federal Government is seeking a location in the Southwest for one of three penal institutions that have been authorized by Congress. It was explained that for a community to secure the location of this institution there are certain conditions to be met by the community, among them being the donation of a suitable tract of some five hundred acres of land. The meeting was to determine whether or not Hondo should seek the location of this institution and to lay plans for securing it.

There was considerable discussion of a more or less informal nature, centering mainly around the difficulties to be surmounted in meeting the requirements of the locating authorities. In this connection the following self-explanatory communications were read:

UNITED STATES SENATE
Committee on Military Affairs
March 18, 1936.

Judge R. J. Noonan,
Hondo, Texas.

Dear Friend:

Since receiving your recent letter I have looked into the matter about which you wrote and I send you here-with a communication which will explain itself.

Yours very sincerely,

MORRIS SHEPPARD.

QUIHI NOTES.

Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand. Gen. 21: 18.

Not only "the cannons spit forth their iron indignation", nor are the die-hards only found on the battlefield. The bondwoman, Hagar, is in an ugly mood. The "world" has treated her harshly and heaven is pitch-dark over her, like a closed iron vault; her blood is boiling in fire and tury and her thoughts are black as thunder. She has grown listless with resentment and rage and with the gnashing of teeth she resigned herself to her boy's death and her own. Not even the voice of the angel stirs her blood or her attention; anger and wrath have closed her ear for comfort, and she has many kinfolds that have broken with their God because He hasn't changed heaven and earth to suit their whimsical taste. Were He as we, He would have dropped them in the waste-basket long ago. But He is long-suffering; also with Hagar. A stern voice speaks, rousés, commands: Arise—lift up—hold him in thine hand. Let the mother make the start, be an example of faith and courage, of aim and purpose, carry on to the bitter end, if needs be. Lend a helping hand, do not live for your own interests and thoughts only, leaving the lad in the lurch and lure of others, lift his strength and talent and ambition with that magic wand, the mother's love. Hold that hand and heart in yours, a contact that has no substitute; hold it understandingly, patiently, wisely, especially when the road becomes meandering and rugged, lined with vexing problems and difficulties and false notions of emancipation, hold it, without stifling initiative and originality and individuality, a child's inalienable rights, hold it with prayer and example, and forever. Thus "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world", and, what means more, it leads out of the desert of this world into higher and better regions. Indeed, a volume of wholesome pedagogy in that command for Hagar and us.

A home fire-brigade is a great thing and worthy of emulation and drill, when you live beyond the help of the fire department. Mr. Hy. G. Boehle went through it with his little band of fire-fighters. The corn-crib was found in flames recently and the fire alarm brought out the force at once and by united efforts and hard, systematic work the homefolks had it under control in a short time. The Lord has given strength and courage, and those aching limbs and heads, we hope, a thing of the past.

A Sunday child—particularly lucky in this world, as some have it—was born to Mr. and Mrs. Emil Lindeburg. It is a sturdy little boy and many faces are smiling with the happy parents. May the Lord bless the child—and only He can do it.

Lenten service on Wednesday (sorry, some have no time for their suffering Lord), Ladies' Aid on Thursday (come one, come all), Sunday school teachers' meeting on Friday (they are "regular"). All this to come off next week—and some.

It's Thursday 1:20 A. M. and we've just returned from the deathbed of Henry Ben Hartmann, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hartmann, who has suddenly been called home at the age of 18 years, 2 months and 24 days, during a brief stay at the Medina Hospital. May the Lord comfort the bereaved family and friends.

"Sesbania, commonly called wild hemp, increased cotton yields 30 per cent on my land this year." P. M. Armstrong of Clint told W. S. Foster, county agricultural agent of El Paso county. The sesbania was plowed under in 1934 as a green manure crop when it had reached a height of four feet.

On a five acre lot seeded in January 1934 to bermuda sod, dallis and carpet grass, lespedeza and white dutch clover, by J. P. Hilliard of Orange county, 35 head of dairy cattle and several horses have been pastured at night since January 1935. A part of the land was covered by trees and brush at the start, and all except enough trees for shade were cut and moved. The weeds were cut in the summer. In spite of the number of animals kept on the pasture, a large quantity of hay was cut in September and the grasses have grown up since it was cut.

D. A. James has doubled the carrying capacity of the pastures on the Bennett Ranch in Jackson county which he has seeded to dallis grass. Fall seeding with about 10 pounds of seed per acre has proved most satisfactory. And a good sod is developed about a year earlier if it is sown in a field following a row crop rather than in the native sod. Cattle prefer it to other grasses, and is always the first to put out following a heavy frost, James stated. This grass seeds freely and James is devising a seed harvester to use in the spring, so that he might seed his entire pastures just as fast as practical.

Plans for an investigation of the cotton root rot problem in Texas were approved by the board of regents of the University of Texas at its recent meeting. This investigation will be made under the direction of Dr. G. W. Goldsmith, professor of botany and bacteriology at the university. The research is made possible by a grant to the institution from the Clayton Foundation for Research. The foundation has authorized this work for three years unless it is successfully terminated sooner, or unless it shall be agreed between the university and the foundation to discontinue it before the expiration of the three years. The first phase of the investigation will be conducted between now and April 1, 1936. It is expected that the preliminary research in this and other practical problems pertaining to economic plants in Texas already made by the university's department of botany and bacteriology will furnish a helpful background for the new investigation and that much progress can be made in the direction of solving this problem which is of concern to all cotton farmers of the state.

Until there is such a change in our economic system as will enable farmers who have homes to keep them instead of losing them, as many are doing, the government's efforts to promote resettlement must prove abortive because of inability to meet extortionate taxes and interest rates.

It is hard to imagine how a bigger mess could be made out of efforts to provide old age pensions than has been made by the politicians both national and in the state of Texas. If the advocates of the Townsend Plan could get down to earth and, instead of advocating the impossible spending spree of $200.00 per month, ask for the average man's income it would have all the plans of the politicians ready for the discard at once.

By what process of mental gymnastics do men completely change their plans and processes? During the World War we were taught that food would win the war, and men felt it their duty to give without thought of pay the last ounce of their strength to make the earth produce in abundance. For three years now we have fought the depression in reverse—taxing consumers to pay for a reduction in the production of food and raiment. "What fools us mortals be!"

The most accurate way to evaluate a country's tax burden is in the light of the relation of taxes to the national income. On that basis, the U. S. tax problem is becoming steadily worse. A United States News tabulation says that when our national income reached its 1929 peak of $79,000,000,000, taxation accounted for 12.4 per cent of it. In 1933, national income touched its post-war low, dropping to $43,500,000,000, and taxes took 18.6 per cent. In 1934 and 1935, taxes took 19 per cent and 19.1 per cent of the national income, respectively. Highest taxed nation is England, where 25 per cent of national income goes for taxation. But England has a balanced budget, while in the U. S. government spending is far outrunning revenue and creating deficits which must be paid for in the future.—Industrial News Review.

As in the Supreme Court's gold-clause decision, its more recent effort to hold with the administration in its TVA decision is more significant in its implications than in its immediate conclusions. If the sale of electric current, which must be constantly produced to maintain a continuous supply, is to have the same legal status as the sale, for instance, of a surplus of army beef, then every waterfall in the country becomes a potential power plant, built and sustained at the taxpayers' expense and furnishing current to every village and hamlet that can bond itself for the cost of installation. The field for capital investments in bonds, both national, municipal and what-not, that pay no taxes on investment or income, thus becomes so extensive as to stagger the imagination. Were it a bona fide plunge into socialism one might contemplate it with more equanimity. But with bondholders holding a mortgage over the entire electrification system and drawing interest tribute from every kilowatt of juice generated, with the government merely serving as agent for the bondholders and underwriting their investment at the risk and expense of the taxpayers, the picture is not a cheerful one.

A SHAMEFUL PERFORMANCE.

The spectacle of Congress passing a measure, with the advice and connivance of an executive, designedly to circumvent the law, as interpreted by the court of last resort, and accomplish by subterfuge and indirection what cannot be done legally, is enough to make fair Columbia hang her glory crowned head in shame!

Instead of being falsely branded a measure to conserve the soil resources of the country, by bonusing those who will dicker to change crops on certain acreages, the substitute AAA ought to be captioned an act to offer half a billion dollars of the taxpayers' money for the farmers' votes to keep the New Dealers in office.

If the pretense were not so evident and the real purpose so palpably plain as to insult both the intelligence and the moral sense of those it pretends to help, even a superficial analysis of the measure is enough to convince that it must disappoint those who expect to find permanent relief in its provisions.

If we accept the new AAA at its face value, forgetting the PRETENSE that the farmers' ills are brought about by erosion and that his "lost buying power" is to be restored to him by taxing the consumers to bonus him for planting certain acres in "soil-feeding" crops instead of man and animal "food and feed crops", and accept it as an honest effort to restore "the farmers' buying power", it stands condemned for ignoring the cause of the illness and proposing an artificial palliative instead of the only true remedy—removal of the cause.

Agriculture's ailment is too acute to be caused by soil erosion and too deep-seated to be cured by temporary palliatives—however soothing a half-billion dollar bonus may be.

The ailment can only be aggravated by crop reduction and by regimentation from Washington.

Granting "lost buying power" is what ails agriculture, let us try to understand what "buying power" means.

"Buying power" does not mean how many dollars—be they 100-cent or 59-cent ones—the farmer has in his pockets.

It means how much he can exchange the products of his toil for in the products of other's toil—the more he can get the greater his "buying power".

Obviously at best, then, the AAA offers only a temporary stimulus, an artificial palliative that temporarily soothes but does not cure, for it does not touch much less remove the cause.

"Farm relief" that does not remove the cause is a travesty, a fraud and a deception.

"Farm relief" must begin with a free access to the markets of the world where the farmer can barter his products for the products of the world untrammelled by artificial trade restrictions.

The tariff must go that "farm relief" may come.

To facilitate the exchange of goods, he must have a metallic money of the same metal as the money of the people with whom he trades.

This money, to facilitate the settlement of trade balances, must be stabilized, as the constitution provides and intends, in "weight and fineness"; any other stabilization is but a figment of the imagination!

At home, agriculture must have an economical government that imposes no excessive tax burdens on the farmer or on the business or industrial agencies that serve him, thereby assuring him low overhead and living costs through reasonable transportation, storage, processing, insurance and interest costs.

Agriculture must be protected from the exploitations of monopoly, the worst form of which is the money-monopoly which vests the control of credit currency in the hands of private money changers instead of retaining it where it belongs, in the hands of the people as the sole function of the people's government and none other.

Thus would agriculture be relieved of the intolerable burden of paying interest to bondholders while at the same time paying the taxes from which both the bond investments and the income therefrom are exempted.

With these reforms assured, agriculture can cheerfully look forward to the time when it will again be a cash business, done on a cash basis, and beyond the power of the credit man to dictate the sale of the farmer's produce or the crop gamblers to dictate its price.

Short of a removal of the causes of Agriculture's ills, and restoration of freedom to work out his own salvation in harmony with nature's laws, any proposal of "relief" for the farmer is a sham and a fraud, and a shameful performance that the sorriest of politicians, to say nothing of real statesmen, should scorn!

As in its gold-clause decision, there is written large all over the Supreme Court's recent TVA decision that very human trait of hesitating to disturb the established order of things—even if such hesitation stretches a fixed principle to the breaking point: To hold, as the court did, in effect, to hand down its decision sustaining the administration's TVA policy, that there is, justifying the latter because of the first, a parallel between the policy of the government selling a surplus of shoes not needed for the army for which they were made, or a lot of outmoded guns which the army can no longer use and the making of which has ceased, and the sale of electric current which must be constantly produced and which, aside from not being an over-supply for the army, was never made for the army in the first place, may satisfy the legal mind but it neither parallels common sense nor satisfies good conscience. The lay mind will find in such a conclusion a more preponderant effort on the part of the judicial branch of the government not to upset an established policy sanctioned by both the legislative and the executive branches than desire to hold strictly to the law and the reason in the case. Since human frailties are not to be unexpected of the wisest and most conscientious, this decision, like the gold-clause decision already found impracticable in dealing with Panama, should emphasize most forcefully the importance of electing both legislators and executives with more regard for their oath to sustain the constitution than to stoop to recommending or enacting legislation about which there is a "reasonable doubt as to its constitutionality".

Congress over-rode the President's veto and voted to pay the soldiers' bonus. But it lacks the courage to force payment in national currency and bids fair to either postpone the time of payment or else destroy any general relief the payment would bring to the country as a whole by saddling an additional tax burden on the backs of the people. It is a strange fate that has so pursued the Roosevelt administration that every move that promised relief has by some foolish mistake been rendered futile and abortive.

FARMING is not familiar with all the provisions of the Frazier-Lehmke bill, but insofar as it provides for issuing Federal currency to the extent needed to pay off farm and home mortgages that have matured, and taking up the mortgage and extending it for the mortgagor, it offers a better means of relieving distress and ending the depression than all the relief experiments yet attempted. Strange we have so few statesmen capable of seeing it or so many too dominated by the money changers to enact it into law.

We have observed that, in good times or bad, the farmer who operates on a self-sustaining basis as nearly as possible and makes his cash crop a surplus crop after the living has been provided, in the long run, is always more prosperous than the man who risks his all on one throw of the dice. Make your plans to be self-sustaining as nearly as possible in 1936.

SPARKLERS

IT IS THE BEST—

Friend who can prove his friendship when you are in the wrong!
Friendship that sets you right when you are in error!
Counsel that is backed by the counselor's experience!
Music that wells from a loving heart!
Prayer that is voiced in deeds of loving kindness.
Faith that can suffer long and be strong!
Hope that knows no fear!

LIFE'S ZEST.

Faith that
An Omniscient
Purpose orders our lives,
Misuse them as we may, gives life
Its zest!

—FLETCHER DAVIS.

HOW IS THIS FOR A WINNER?

For President—
General Johnson Hagood.
Platform—
Liberty under the constitution shall be preserved.
Slogan—
Unite to win!

When the devil needs an ally he makes some mortal fool mad!

An honest man scorns to win by dishonest means!

The counsels of the angry man are an abomination in the sight of the peaceful!

VACHEL LINDSAY WELCOMES BILLY SUNDAY.

The Golden Gates of Heaven swing wide open,
and Vachel Lindsay extends his hand,
a million voices sing, "Welcome";
a million harps strum, "Welcome";
a million trumpets blare, "Welcome";
for Billy Sunday is coming home.

Vachel Lindsay, creator of "Congo",
author of "General Booth Enters Heaven", wrote the words to the song that greets the ears of the man who saved a million souls;
"Hallelujah! Billy Sunday forever!"
is the welling chorus, welling chorus;
only the immortal Lindsay—
Lindsay, the artist; Lindsay, the poet—could paint such a picture, create such a setting.

And only a Lindsay could describe it as he described it on the front page of "Heaven's Star Journal" the next day;
Lindsay, America's most picturesque poet,
Lindsay, a modern, singing troubador,
reported the home-coming of Sunday, America's most picturesque evangelist, savior of a million souls.

FRUIT ORCHARD.

This long process sweeps the meadow hall
Where sweating plowmen share its symphony
This precious stir and whisper of a tree
This lilting scale of lark and throstle's call
Are tuneful as silver waterfall.
This wealth of buds inspected by the bee
Who flits beyond with hurried industry,
Make orchard all a study—spring or fall.

The spring invites new life . . . and birds to nest.
Leaf-hanging valances with curtained shade
Have given all these feathered ones their rest
A peaceful thought and purpose to be weighed—
An orchard offers more than neat design—
Here grace and joy and sustenance combine!
—GRACE M. GRAVES.

JONGLEUR.

Leafing trees
Hold up lacy arms,
Welcoming
A merry jongleur
To the brilliant
Festival of Spring returning.
Frail of wing,
Alone he comes
To my liveoak tree;
Black and yellow minstrel
Darting from limb to limb
Scattering song—
Like shifting, shining lights.
Sing, oriole, sing
Your madrigal of Spring!
Sing, bird, sing
Wild and beautiful thing!
—MARY OCTAVIA DAVIS.

THE DAWN OF HOPE.

I came to think of life as full of night,
Chill night alone, without a ray of light;
And this I did a night when sleep took wings
And there before me marched a host of things
Which oft I glimpsed, but never really saw,
Which now I saw with mingled fear and awe . . .
Those mysteries and contradictions rife
Within this seeming, checkered, doubtful life:
The friendless friendships left us from the past,
Whose weathered tombstones long their shadows cast;
That haunting voice of that most sad refrain,
Deep driven, baneful, thorn within the brain,
That moaning, weird refrain, "It might have been".
And in the dark the ghost of it was seen,
In broken sobs, still wailing, "Might have been",
And drawing back the veil, showed Springtime sheen.
Upon my stony pillow fell the rain,
A gentle patter, then a sobbing rain.
And turning on this stony pillow round,
There in the far flung Eastern sky I found
The dawn of hope appearing on the hill
And lo, with light the darksome earth did fill
And heaped to wipe the timid tears away
As sleeping half, and waking half I lay.

V. ZIEGLER.

THANK GOD FOR HOMES.

I love the shelter of my walls when wintry nights are cold and drear,
Our chairs drawn cozily around the hearthstone's warmth and cheer.
I love the shelter of my walls when all outside is lashed with rain,
All storm shut out, comfort within, a snug retreat till tempests wane.
I love the shelter of my walls; pity the poor unlucky wights
Without protection of a home on stormy days and wintry nights.
I love the shelter of my walls, and pray the time may never come
That I this haven must forsake.
Thank God for comforts of a home.
—ELLIE WILCOX BURT.

PRAIRIE-BORN.

I have not known the canyoned streets, nor worn
The dress and ways of busy avenue
Nor worshiped properly from bench and pew—
For I, who walk alone, am prairie-born,
To quiet land and skies forever sworn.
Within a domed, cathedral night I knew
The candle-flame of stars; a glimpse of You
Across the rippling aisles of wheat and corn.

VERITY.

Again the Earth is blest with new spring days:
Tiny grass blades reach up to God in praise

Thankful for the clouds and the crafty storms
That add new strength and beauty to their forms.

Again the woods and fields resound new thrills:
The voice of birds at nesting time quite fills

The air, and we should learn our lessons how
To aid the honest farmer with his plow.

Again my thankful heart and soul touch God:
When flowers lift their heads above the sod,

And with the children tired of Winter's strife
Together play and sing the songs of Life.

Again, let us take up our cross, and hum
The Psalms that better days to us may come.

O how I love to watch all Nature bloom:
The grave-plot finds no place in my love loom.

—MARY RUTAN BYERLY.

GOD'S LIVING TEMPLE.

Lovely vine-clad window-pane,
Sunlight brightly dancing through,
Shines upon a girl's glad face,
Beautiful and virtuous too.

Light of God reminding her
Gone the long and weary night:
Glad of heart she flees from care,
While her soul now seeks the light.

Men have sought her in the past,
But they came with lies alone:
Evil men will never blast
Virtue from this virgin throne.

Gold and silver of this world,
Glutton's feast, or Drunkard's bowl,
All the wickedness unfurled
Can not taint this maiden's soul.

Ever helpful, pure and kind,
Busy with her deeds of love,
Pure in heart and keen in mind,
She communes with God above
—ELIZABETH GILES WINN

THE WIND.

The spring wind is a spry young thing, so capricious and gay.
Across the valley she comes, teasing the trees as they sway
Under her fascination.
The brown-eyed daisy nods in acknowledgment of her love,
While from some secluded throne of green, the gentle gray dove
Pours out his adoration.

Through the sun-filled meadow, through grasses, rain-washed, clean and sweet
The wind comes with its fairy fingers to tickle my feet.
The mischievous lass!
Soothingly she pats my body as over me she glides,
Whispering a soft and fond farewell as she swiftly strides
Across the waving grass.

Flitting back to the trees the wind shyly whispers her jokes.
The cottonwoods gayly twitter, while the tall and stately oaks
Bow their acclaim.
The streams drowsily murmur in languorous, sweet content,
As she playfully dips at them, on madcap pleasure bent,
Singing a glad refrain.

—ANGIE ANDERSON.

VICTORY.

Rejoice! For the Christ is triumphant again
Though the cross and the tomb held His form,
He broke every shackle that caused Him pain
And arose with the coming of morn.
Soldiers who guard the king's seal, fall as dead
Before holy angels, that sit at His head.

Rejoice! All ye weary and burdened of heart
There is hope in His Kingdom above
For the Savior has promised to each of us part
In the city of unending Love.
He arose from His bonds and unto us gave
The victory won over Death and the Grave.

—KAY McCULLOUGH.

SPRINGTIME IN THE HILLS.

As I went walking in the glen
I met a host of little men,
They were very bright and gay
Looking for the flowers today.

They were dressed in mossy green
But with magic eyes were seen,
So if them you wish to see,
Use magic eyes, just like me.

The birds were singing a melody
And fairies dancing in their glee,
I love the rocks and rushing rills
And the wooded templed hills.

As up and down the glen I went
Drinking in its sweet content,
A peace stole into my soul
Whispering, the grave is not the goal.
—DAISY BROOKING.

FAITH.

Was it
A far-cry, from
Out the past, calling me?
The answer to my prayer shall yet
Come true.
—N. H. DUNNING.

Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this — and see that you get what you want.
